I. Agency Policies

A. Quality Assurance

The Mental Health Centers of Western Illinois is licensed by the Department of Human Services Division of Mental Health, Division of Developmental Disabilities, and Division of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse to provide services. In addition, the agency's Outpatient, Substance Abuse, Case Management, Community Housing, and Developmental Training Programs are CARF accredited, ensuring you receive quality services.

B. Code of Ethics

The Mental Health Centers of Western Illinois has been established to provide services to individuals in a professional, competent and ethical manner.

The following guidelines are intended to provide staff members of the Mental Health Centers of Western Illinois with direction regarding professional behavior in the provision of the agency's services.

Professional Conduct

- Professional conduct incorporates the behavior that employees are to exhibit. Being professional means having specialized expertise in a given area in which we maintain a high level of proficiency. It also means we accept a level of self-regulation and agree to live by rule-governed conduct. This means we refrain from acts that violate the public trust, the client trust, or the client-employee professional relationship. If you have any questions about this, it is always best to ask/consult with your supervisor.
- Boundaries are defined as limits that protect the space between the professional's power and the client's vulnerability. Maintaining appropriate boundaries controls this power differential and allows for a safe connection between the employee and client based on the client's needs, i.e., services billable because they are on the client's Individual Treatment Plan.
- It is always the employee's responsibility to establish appropriate boundaries with clients. The employee's responsibility is to set and maintain boundaries.(Setting limits)
- The employee should avoid situations where the worker has a personal or business relationship, as well as a professional one. (Dual Relationships)
- The employee must refrain from any activities that may violate client trust.
- The employee must not share their religious beliefs or values with clients, or their political views.
- The employee cannot provide outside services to a client or his/her family. This includes selling products or services.
- The employee cannot have a sexual relationship with a client or an immediate family member of a client.
- Provide services to individuals, respecting their dignity, integrity and rights as stated in agency documentation. (see Client Rights statement)
- Provide services to individuals regardless of gender, age, race, religion, national origin, color, disability, sexual orientation, HIV status or legal status.
- Respect an individual's beliefs and differences by not attempting to change or influence to personal views.
- Regard interactions or documentation provided by an individual in the utmost confidential manner and only discuss or release such information according to legal standards.
- Ensure individuals know the benefits, risks, side effects and other pertinent information in order to make an informed decision regarding treatment.
- Provide services to individuals according to one's qualifications, training, competence and position.

- Harassing/abusive behaviors (including physical, verbal, sexual or psychological) or acts of negligence will not be tolerated toward any individual. Employees are responsible for reporting such behaviors or acts to the appropriate staff.
- The relationship developed through provision of services must remain professional at all times.
- One's position, relationship or services should never be utilized to exploit an individual for personal gain.
- Employee knowledge, skills, and abilities should be utilized to provide individuals with continuous quality services to maximize their full potential and functioning.
- Recognize potential situations of violence and protect the individual from harming him/herself or society by notification of the proper authorities.
- Conduct oneself in a professional manner with personnel and clients of the Mental Health Centers of Western Illinois and organizations associated with the agency at all times while representing MHCWI.
- An exchange of money or gratuities between an employee and a client or client's family is prohibited.
- An exchange of non-monetary gifts of a value estimated not to exceed $10.00 between an employee and a client may be allowed if approved by an Associate Director or Executive Director. The agency realizes that a refusal of a small gift could be detrimental to the therapeutic relationship.
- A employee may be a witness only to MHCWI documentation. Documentation from other sources and/or notarization services is not allowed.

Personal Conduct

- Employees will ensure agency funding and property are utilized in a proper manner, and not access either for personal gain.
- Employees are responsible for reporting conflicts of interest to supervisory personnel and abstaining from any decision-making in regards to the conflict.
- Waste, fraud, abuse and other questionable activities/practices committed by employees will not be tolerated. Employees are responsible for reporting any of these acts to the appropriate staff.
- Employees will not engage in reprisal activities against other personnel.
- ◆ A supervisory staffing will be held as a result of an employee being found guilty of violating any of the above standards. The employee and his immediate supervisor will be present at this meeting. (The Executive Director will be informed and may wish to be present as well.)

C. Drug-Free Workplace / No Tolerance Policy

The Mental Health Centers of Western Illinois recognizes that certain substances and behaviors are detrimental to the treatment process. The following guidelines have been established to maintain a drug-free, healthy, and safe work environment for the provision of services:

- The unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of a controlled substance, including cannabis, is prohibited in or on the premises of agency facilities and vehicles.
- The possession or use of alcohol in agency owned facilities and vehicles is prohibited. The possession, consumption, or storage of alcoholic beverages in the MHCWI- managed buildings or on the property is prohibited. This prohibition includes the possession, consumption, or storage of alcoholic beverages in a unit or on property by the tenant and by any visitor to any unit or property, including any member of the tenants' family.

If advised by the physician that the drug will alter behavior such that job duties cannot be safely performed, the employee must report the use of the drug to the supervisor or Executive Director.
- The sale of smoking products is prohibited on agency-owned/managed property.
- MHCWI follows the Smoke Free Illinois Act which prohibits the use of tobacco products in the buildings or vehicles owned by the agency. However, tenants are allowed to use tobacco products in their apartments, except in Sterling Apartments and other designated apartments, which is tobacco free.

III. Client Education

A. Advance Directives

What are advance directives?

"Advance directive" is a general term that describes two types of legal documents:

- Living wills
- Medical power of attorney

These documents allow you to instruct others about your future medical care wishes and appoint a person to make healthcare decisions if you are not able to speak for yourself. Each state regulates the use of advance directives differently.

What is a living will?

A living will is a type of advance directive in which you put in writing your wishes about medical treatment for the end of your life in the event you cannot communicate these wishes directly. Different states name this document differently: for example, it may be called a "directive to physicians," "health care declaration," or "medical directive." Regardless of what it is called, its purpose is to guide your family and doctors in deciding about the use of medical treatments when you are dying.

Your legal right to accept or refuse treatment is protected by the Constitution and case law. However, your state law may define when the living will goes into effect, and may limit the treatments to which the living will applies. You should read your state's suggested document carefully to ensure that it reflects your wishes. You can add further instructions or write your own living will to cover situations that the state suggested document might not address. Even if your state does not have a living will law, it is wise to put your wishes about the use of life-sustaining medical treatments in writing.

What is a medical power of attorney?

A medical power of attorney is a document that lets you appoint someone you trust to make decisions about your medical care if you cannot make them yourself.

This type of advance directive can also be called a "healthcare proxy," "appointment of a healthcare agent," or "durable power of attorney for healthcare." The person you appoint may be called your healthcare agent, surrogate, attorney-in-fact, or healthcare proxy. The person you appoint through a medical power of attorney usually is authorized to deal with all medical situations, not only end-of-life decisions when you cannot speak for yourself. Thus, he or she can speak for you if you become temporarily incapacitated-after an accident, for example-as well as if you become incapacitated because of irreversible disease or injury.

Generally, the law requires your agent to make the same medical decisions that you would have made, if possible. To help your agent do this, it is essential that you discuss your values about the quality of life that is important to you and the kinds of decisions you would make in various situations. For example, how aggressively would you want medical treatments supplied if you had Alzheimer's disease or if you were in a coma and unlikely to recover? Share your thoughts concerning someone you have known who was very ill and how you would want to be treated if you were in a similar situation. These discussions will help your agent to form a picture of your views regarding the use of medical treatments.

If this discussion does not take place, your agent will have to examine any general statements you might have made, your religious and moral beliefs, and what he or she knows about your values in general. When your wishes about a particular medical decision are not known your agent must act in your best interest, using his or her own judgment depending on your state's law.

Some states let you appoint an agent within the living will. This is different from a medical power of attorney, because an agent appointed in a living will can only make decisions about using medical treatments, and only if you are in one of the medical conditions specified in your state's law (such as "terminally ill," "permanently unconscious," or "imminently dying").

Why do I need advance directives?

Advance directives give you a voice in decisions about your medical treatment, even if you are unconscious or too ill to communicate.

As long as you are able to make and express your own decisions, you can accept or refuse any medical treatment. But if you become seriously ill, you might lose the ability to participate in decisions about your own treatment.

Research has shown that 80 percent of us now die in a medical facility such as a hospital or nursing home, as medical technology can now prolong life as never before. The quality of that life, however, may be greatly reduced. As a result, many patients, families and caregivers face difficult questions about how much technology to use when the patient cannot get better. That means most of us will face a decision about whether to use life-sustaining treatments at the end of our lives. If we cannot speak for ourselves at that point, other people will have to make the decisions for us.

Providing your loved ones and caregivers with the information they need to make medical decisions for you is a great gift. It can spare them emotional anguish and conflict. Making end-of-life decisions for someone else is difficult and painful for loved ones and caregivers. You can make those decisions much easier for your family by talking about your wishes while you are able to do so.

If your loved ones do not know your preferences, decisions are even harder to make and serious conflicts can arise between your family and medical caregivers or within your family itself. Without clear evidence about a patient's wishes, some care providers will continue treatment, not only because they are trained to do so, but also to protect themselves from any liability. Even if your loved ones believe that you would not want a treatment, they might not be able to stop it without some direction from you depending on the state.

Remember, it's up to you to take the initiative and express your wishes. Your family or doctor is not likely to raise the issue for you.

B. HIV and AIDS

Human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, is the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). The virus weakens a person's ability to fight infections and cancer. People with HIV are said to have AIDS when they develop certain infections or cancers or when their CD4 count is less than 200. CD4 count is determined by a blood test in a doctor's office.

Having HIV does not always mean that you have AIDS. It can take many years for people with the virus to develop AIDS. HIV and AIDS cannot be cured. Although people with AIDS will likely one day die from an AIDS-related illness, there are ways to help people stay healthy and live-longer.

What Is AIDS?

AIDS is the final stage of HIV infection. When the immune system CD4 cells drop to a very low level, a person's ability to fight infection is lost. In addition, there are several conditions that occur in people with HIV infection with this degree of immune system failure -- these are called AIDS defining illnesses.

How Do People Get HIV?

A person gets HIV when an infected person's body fluids (blood, semen, fluids from the vagina or breast milk) enter his/her bloodstream. The virus can enter the blood through linings in the mouth, anus or sex organs, or through broken skin.

Both men and women can spread HIV. A person with HIV can feel okay and still give the virus to others. Pregnant women with HIV also can give the virus to their babies.

Common ways people get HIV:

- Sharing a needle to take drugs.
- Having unprotected sex with an infected person.

You cannot get HIV from:

- Touching or hugging someone who has HIV/AIDS.
- Public bathrooms or swimming pools.
- Sharing cups, utensils, or telephones with someone who has HIV/AIDS.
- Bug bites.

Who Can Get HIV?

Anyone can get HIV if they engage in certain activities. You may have a higher risk of getting HIV if you:

- Have unprotected sex. This means vaginal or anal intercourse without a condom or oral sex without a latex barrier with a person infected with HIV.
- Share needles to inject drugs or steroids with an infected person. The disease can also be transmitted by dirty needles used to make a tattoo or in body piercing.
- Receive a blood transfusion from an infected person. This is very unlikely in the U.S. and Western Europe, where all blood is tested for HIV infection.

- Are born to a mother with HIV infection. A baby can also get HIV from the breast milk of an infected woman.

If you fall into any of the categories above, you should consider being tested for HIV.

Health care workers are at risk on the job and should take special precautions. Some health care workers have become infected after being stuck with needles containing HIV-infected blood or less frequently, after infected blood comes into contact with an open cut or through splashes into the worker's eyes or inside their nose.

HIV Tests

The only way to know if you have HIV is to take an HIV test. Most tests look for signs of HIV in your blood. A small sample of blood is taken from your arm. The blood is sent to a lab and tested for HIV.

Clinics that do HIV tests keep your test results secret. Some clinics even perform HIV tests without ever taking your name (anonymous testing).

Before taking an HIV test:

- Ask the clinic what privacy rules it follows
- Think about how knowing you have HIV would change your life
- Ask your doctor or nurse any questions you have about HIV, AIDS or the HIV test

Who Should Be Tested?

Currently, it is recommended that people who engage in risky behaviors such as unprotected sex or needle-sharing -- and all pregnant women be tested for HIV infection.

Does HIV Have Symptoms?

Some people get flu-like symptoms a month or two after they have been infected. These symptoms often go away within a week to a month. A person can have HIV for many years before feeling ill.

As the disease progresses, both women and men may experience yeast infections on the tongue (thrush), and women may develop severe vaginal yeast infections or pelvic inflammatory disease.

What Are the Symptoms of AIDS?

Signs that HIV is turning into AIDS include:

- A fever that won't go away.
- Sweating while you sleep.
- Feeling tired all the time. (not from stress or lack of sleep)
- Feeling sick all the time.
- Losing weight.
- Swollen glands. (neck, groin or underarms)

What Infections Do People With AIDS Get?

People with AIDS are extremely vulnerable to infection, called AIDS defining illnesses, and often exhibit the following conditions:

- Kaposi's sarcoma, a skin tumor that looks like dark purple blotches.
- Mental changes and headaches due to fungal infections or tumors in the brain and spinal cord.
- Shortness of breath and difficulty breathing due to infections of the lungs.
- Dementia.
- Severe malnutrition.
- Chronic diarrhea.

How Is AIDS Diagnosed?

If a person with HIV infection has a CD4 count that drops below 200 -- or if certain infections appear (AIDS defining illnesses) -- that person is considered to have AIDS.

How Can I Keep From Getting HIV?

The best way to protect yourself is to avoid activities that put you at risk. There's no way to tell by looking at someone if he or she has HIV. Always protect yourself.

- Use latex condoms (rubbers) whenever you have any type of sex (vaginal, anal, or oral).
- Don't use condoms made from animal products.
- Use water-based lubricants. Oil-based lubricants can weaken condoms.
- Never share needles to take drugs.
- Avoid getting drunk or high. People who are drunk or high may be less likely to protect themselves.

What Is the Outlook for Someone With HIV or AIDS?

It depends on how the virus responds to early treatment. When treatment fails to decrease the replication of the virus, the effects can become life threatening, and the infection can progress to AIDS.

Even with treatment, some people seem to naturally experience a more rapid course towards AIDS. However, the majority of HIV patients who receive appropriate treatment do well and live healthy lives for years.

C. Tuberculosis (TB)

What Is Tuberculosis?

Tuberculosis, commonly referred to as TB, is a bacterial infection that can spread through the lymph nodes and bloodstream to any organ in your body but is usually found in the lungs. Most people who are exposed to TB actually never develop symptoms. The bacteria can live in an inactive form in the body. Medication can be given to help get rid of the inactive bacteria. However, if the immune system weakens, such as in people with HIV or as we age, the bacteria can activate. In their active state, TB bacteria cause death of tissue in the infected organs, possibly resulting in death.

Because the bacteria that cause tuberculosis are transmitted through the air, the disease can be quite contagious. However, it is nearly impossible to catch TB simply by passing an infected person on the street. To be at risk, you must be exposed to the organisms constantly, by living or working in close quarters with someone who has the active disease. Even then, because the bacteria generally stay dormant after they invade the body; only 10% of people infected with TB will ever come down with the active disease. The remaining 90% will show no signs of infection, nor will they be able to spread the disease to others. Dormant infections can eventually become active, though, so even people without symptoms should receive medical treatment.

Once widespread, TB became relatively rare with the help of antibiotics developed in the 1950s. Today, however, a new and highly resistant form has emerged, creating a public-health hazard in many large cities worldwide. If you have TB -- in its active or dormant state -- you must seek medical treatment.

What Causes It?

Tuberculosis is generally caused by exposure to microscopic airborne droplets containing the bacterium Mycobacterium tuberculosis. The disease is almost never transmitted through clothes, bedding or other personal items. Because most people with TB exhale only a few of these germs with each breath, you can contract the disease only if you are exposed to an infected person for a long time. If you spend eight hours a day for six months, or 24 hours a day for two months, with someone with an active case of TB, you have a 50% chance of getting infected.

People who are malnourished or who live in close quarters stand the greatest chance of contracting tuberculosis. Therefore, the conditions that accompany poverty, although not a cause of tuberculosis, certainly contribute to its ability to spread. Healthcare workers, long-term hospital patients, and prison workers or inmates also face a greater-than-normal risk of becoming infected with TB. The active form of the infection is more likely to occur in people with weakened immune systems, such as those with AIDS, or blood cancers, such as leukemia.

What Are the Symptoms?

You will generally have no symptoms if you are infected with TB. In fact, you may not even be aware that you have the disease until it is revealed through a skin test, perhaps during a routine checkup. The Mantoux skin test

-- performed in a doctor's office or health department -- is the most reliable detector of TB. A small amount of liquid material is injected just under the top layer of your skin on your arm. After two to three days, a doctor or nurse will read the test to see if it's positive -- a hard, red welt at the injection site of five to 15 millimeters, depending on your risk factors for developing active TB. A positive test means that you have been infected with TB at some point, though not necessarily in its active form. An X-ray of your lungs will help reveal if the disease is active.

If you are concerned that you have active TB, look for these symptoms:

- Sensation of not feeling well
- Cough, at first with yellow or green mucus and occasionally bloody later in the disease.
- Fatigue
- Shortness of breath
- Weight loss
- Slight fever, night sweats
- Pain in the chest, back, or kidneys, and perhaps all three

Call Your Doctor If:

- You have any of the symptoms listed for TB, especially if you live in crowded conditions, are malnourished, or have HIV. (Note: Virtually all of the symptoms of tuberculosis can be confused with those of other diseases; bloody mucus, for example, can also be symptom of pneumonia.)
- You have been exposed to someone with active tuberculosis.

D. Sexually Transmitted Diseases (STDs)

What Are STDs?

STDs are sexually transmitted diseases. This means they are most often — but not exclusively — spread by sexual intercourse. AIDS, chlamydia, genital herpes, genital warts, gonorrhea, some forms of hepatitis, syphilis and trichomoniasis are STDs.

STDs used to be called venereal diseases or VD. They are among the most common contagious diseases. More than 65 million Americans have an incurable STD. Each year, 15.3 million new cases are reported; half of these infections are lifelong.

STDs are serious illnesses that require treatment. Some STDs, such as AIDS, cannot be cured and are deadly. By learning more about STDs, you can find out ways to protect yourself.

You can get an STD by vaginal, anal, or oral sex. You can also be infected with trichomoniasis by contact with damp or moist objects such as towels, wet clothing or toilet seats, although it is more commonly spread by sexual contact. You are at high risk if:

- You have more than one sex partner.
- You have sex with someone who has had many partners.
- You don't use a condom when having sex.
- You share needles when injecting intravenous drugs.
- You trade sex for money or drugs.

Except for AIDS and hepatitis B, sexually transmitted diseases can be cured or managed if they are treated early. You may not realize you have an STD until it has damaged your reproductive organs (rendering you infertile), your vision, your heart or other organs. Having an STD weakens the immune system and leaves you more vulnerable to other infections. Pelvic inflammatory disease is a complication of many STDs that can leave women unable to have children. It can even kill you. If you pass an STD to your newborn child, the baby may suffer permanent harm or death.

What Causes STDs?

STDs include just about every kind of infection. Bacterial STDs include chlamydia, gonorrhea and syphilis. Viral STDs include AIDS, genital herpes, genital warts (HPV) and hepatitis B. Trichomoniasis is caused by a parasite.

The germs that cause STDs hide in semen, blood, vaginal secretions, and sometimes saliva. Most of the organisms are spread by vaginal, anal, or oral sex, but some, such as those that cause genital herpes and genital warts, may be spread through skin contact. You can get hepatitis B by sharing personal items, such as toothbrushes or razors, with someone who has it.

What are the Symptoms?

STDs often are silent, meaning there are no symptoms. Especially if you are a woman, you may not notice any symptoms until you have developed serious complications. Be on the lookout for:

- A drip or discharge from the penis, urethra, vagina or anus. The color may be white, yellow, green or gray. The discharge may be blood-streaked and it may or may not have a strong odor.
- Genital and/or anal itching or irritation.
- A rash, blisters, sores, lumps, bumps or warts on or around the genitals, anus, or mouth.
- Burning or pain during urination.
- Swollen lymph glands in the groin.
- Pain in the groin or lower belly.
- Vaginal bleeding.
- Pain or swelling of the testicles.
- Swelling or redness of the vagina.
- Weight loss, loose stools, night sweats.
- Flu-like symptoms (such as aches and pains, fevers, and chills).
- Painful sex.
- Yellowing of the skin (jaundice).
- Bleeding from the vagina other than during a monthly period.

Call Your Doctor If:

- You must see a doctor if you have any of the symptoms listed above. DO NOT have any kind of sex with anyone until you see a doctor. Don't wait to get help. Sexually transmitted diseases are very contagious. They may result in serious complications or death if left untreated.
- If one of your current or former sex partners tells you they have or had an STD, see a doctor. Even if you don't have symptoms, you may have the disease.

How Do I Know If I Have an STD?

If you or your sex partner has unprotected sex with anyone else, you are at risk. Ask your doctor to test you for STDs during your annual physical even if you have no symptoms. If you test positive, your sexual partners will need treatment. It may be embarrassing, but you must tell them they have been exposed. It is a matter of life and death.

STDs may be detected during physical examination; through Pap smears; and in tests of blood, urine, and genital and anal secretions.

Don't try to treat an STD yourself. These diseases are contagious and serious. You must see a doctor.
